Comments by Dr. Intemann

Provost Gerald Intemann reported on academic developments at the university. Winter Session continues to show growth in enrollment, with an increase of 13 percent from last year. One hundred twenty-eight courses are scheduled, with almost 2,500 students enrolled. The course work is primarily online and has a predominantly undergraduate focus. Regarding grant activity and awards, the President's Advancing Grantsmanship program has awarded 38 faculty members $2,500 each to develop and submit major grants of $25,000 or greater. This is an increase from 33 awards last year. Subsequently, IUP has a total of $5.6 million in external grant proposals, compared to $3.5 million last year at this time. Dr. Intemann shared that the Academic Affairs Division received funding for six proposed initiatives as part of the Strategic Initiative Projects process. These initiatives include two faculty research clusters, one for Marcellus Shale gas research and the other for research on the reintegration of veterans. Additionally, a workshop engaging and educating our Marcellus Shale partners in industry, government, and businesses has been funded, as well as an initiative continuing and expanding our grant incentive program. Two facilities expanding our instructional capabilities were also funded. These are an OB/birthing simulation laboratory for our Nursing program and a state-of-the-art image analysis facility within our College of Natural Sciences and Mathematics.

Preparing for Middle States

Karen Rose Cercone provided an excellent overview of initiatives both within Academic Affairs and across the university addressing IUP's regional accreditation with Middle States. Dr. Cercone highlighted the activities the university initiated following its last accreditation visit, including the establishment of the university's strategic plan in 2007, the revision of our Liberal Studies program in 2009, and the establishment of an Academic Affairs divisional strategic plan tied to the university's plan. Planning for our decennial visit by Middle States in 2015 -16 will involve a three-year time line beginning next fall. Middle States indicates that continued emphasis is anticipated concerning institutional effectiveness as well as IUP's value added evidence via student learning outcomes.
