A. Intellectual Skills and Modes of Thinking

1. Inquiry, logical thinking, analysis, synthesis. The course is not a simple relation of facts and events but rather is centered around a series of issues intended to challenge the students' ability to recognize problems or ethical issues and to evaluate alternative modes of explanation or policy options. Students will be presented with case studies, e.g. the deculturation and disappearance of tropical forest hunter-gatherers such as the Batak of the Philippines, and be asked to analyze the causes of this process and consider policy alternatives for protecting the interests of such ethnic minorities. As another example, students will be proceeded with information on the interest of such ethnic minorities.

religions in SE Asia - Buddhism and Islam - and be asked to identify common themes in how these foreign religions were modified by interaction with indigenous Southeast Asian cultures.

2. Literacy - writing, reading, speaking, listening. Students will be expected to express effectively their understanding of the countries. Many_misleading_sterentvnes_exist_concerning_the

They will then be asked to discuss and evaluate two alternative hypotheses to explain the origin and relationship of these two populations. The point of this exercise is to help students understand the concept of "race" and the ways in which some races (in this case the SE Asian "Negritos") have in Another example of an effort to have the students define and analyze questions/problems is the issue of the status of refugees in SE Asia. There is great controversy over whether all of these refugees are truly political refugees or simply "economic"

	Southeast Asian countries can not be understood without study of the long history of the region and the 500 hundred years of contact between SE Asia and the West. The course attempts to move away from traditional culture area courses that tend to describe culture traits of different groups in the region in isolation without addressing the political, economic, and historical context in which they developed.
	2. Discusses major intellectual issues and theories of discipline . The course attempts to use case studies of various peoples of Southeast Asia as a vehicle for understanding major intellectual and theoretical issues of interest to contemporary anthropology. For example, the course will cover theories on the origin of
