

GENERIC COURSE SYLLABUS

I. CATALOG DESCRIPTION:

PH 410 CONTEMPORARY PHILOSOPHY:

3c-o1-3sh Survey in depth of 20th-century Western positions such as pragmatism, logical positivism, logical and linguistic analysis, existentialism, and phenomenology.

II. COURSE OBJECTIVES:

- A. Introduce students to dominant schools of philosophical thought in the twentieth century.
  - B. Investigate the concepts, theories, and problems central to

	IV. EVALUATION METHODS will vary from instructor to instructor, but will include at least some of the following and must include some writing
412.	and a final agamination on the first and must include some writing
*
Г
1	·
•

·
	<ul><li>B. Oral Reports on required readings</li><li>C. Short papers</li></ul>
	D. Term paper
	E. Examinations: objective or essay
	F. Final examination
	G. Philosophical Journal
	V. REQUIRED TEXTS: vary with instructor. Texts listed are illustrative only.
	A. Book-length Works: At least one such work must be used. The following are examples of possible choices.
	<ol> <li>A. J. Ayer. Language, Truth and Logic.</li> </ol>
	2. Edmund Husserl. Cartesian Meditations.
7	·
·	•
•
-
= ,
۴.
,
P
2
3
!

LIBERAL STUDIES COURSE APPROVAL FORM

About this form: Use this form only if you wish to have a course included for Liberal Studies credit. The form is intended to assist you in developing your course to meet the university's Ceiteria for Liberal Studies, and to accepte your proposal in a standard order for consideration by the LSC and the UWUCC. If you have questions, contact the Liberal Studies Office, 353 Sutton Hall; telephone, 357-5715.

Do not use this form for technical, professional, or pre-professional courses or for remedial courses, none of which is eligible for Liberal Studies. Do not use this form for sections of the

DADT I BASIC INFORMATION

A. For which category(ies) are you proposing the course? Check all that apply.

LEARNING SKILLS

First English Composition Course

Liberal Studies Form -- 2

ř

PART II. WHICH LIBERAL STUDIES GOALS WILL YOUR COURSE MEET? Check all that apply and attach an explanation.

122	411 Tibarri Studiae general
· · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · ·
#. <sup>1</sup>	L
}_
1
3 1
		_
		=
-		_
• =====		=
;
· ra
-		_
-1
A18-1.		_

Ī		_
1		_
April 1
مناج
-		=

		=

 		_

	· ·
-
Y 	h.;-
7-3		_
	· · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · ·
•——
1	P <sub>1</sub> т —
- F -

	A. INTELLECTUAL SKILLS & MODES OF THINKING:  1. Students will develop the skills of inquiry, abstract logical hinking, critical analysis, synthesis, decision making, and other aspects of he critical process through the close analysis and evaluation of fundamental such Students confront such fundamental questions as "What is the elationship between language and the world?" "What is knowledge?" "What is truth?" Conflicting answers to these questions are knowledge and evaluated. Students are then encouraged to formulate their own processes, and, there will do no hoosest them encouraged to formulate their own processes, and, there will develop literacy, through active critical reading.  2. Students will develop literacy, through active critical reading.
A. INTELLECTUAL SKILLS & MODES OF THINKING:  1. Students will develop the skills of inquiry, abstract logical thinking, critical analysis, synthesis, decision making, and other aspects of the critical process through the close analysis and evaluation of fundamental issues. Students confront such fundamental questions as "What is the relationship between language and the world?" "What is knowledge?" "What is philosophy?" "What is truth?" Conflicting answers to these questions are explored and evaluated. Students are then encouraged to formulate their own apswers and them will do no because them is a second to the critical reading.  2. Students will develon literacy through active critical reading.	A. INTELLECTUAL SKILLS & MODES OF THINKING:  1. Students will develop the skills of inquiry, abstract logical hinking, critical analysis, synthesis, decision making, and other aspects of he critical process through the close analysis and evaluation of fundamental such Students confront such fundamental questions as "What is the elationship between language and the world?" "What is knowledge?" "What is truth?" Conflicting answers to these questions are knowledge and evaluated. Students are then encouraged to formulate their own processes, and, there will do no hoosest them encouraged to formulate their own processes, and, there will develop literacy, through active critical reading.  2. Students will develop literacy, through active critical reading.
A. INTELLECTUAL SKILLS & MODES OF THINKING:  1. Students will develop the skills of inquiry, abstract logical thinking, critical analysis, synthesis, decision making, and other aspects of the critical process through the close analysis and evaluation of fundamental issues. Students confront such fundamental questions as "What is the relationship between language and the world?" "What is knowledge?" "What is philosophy?" "What is truth?" Conflicting answers to these questions are explored and evaluated. Students are then encouraged to formulate their own apswers and them will do no because them is a second to the critical reading.  2. Students will develon literacy through active critical reading.	A. INTELLECTUAL SKILLS & MODES OF THINKING:  1. Students will develop the skills of inquiry, abstract logical hinking, critical analysis, synthesis, decision making, and other aspects of he critical process through the close analysis and evaluation of fundamental such Students confront such fundamental questions as "What is the elationship between language and the world?" "What is knowledge?" "What is truth?" Conflicting answers to these questions are knowledge and evaluated. Students are then encouraged to formulate their own processes, and, there will do no hoosest them encouraged to formulate their own processes, and, there will develop literacy, through active critical reading.  2. Students will develop literacy, through active critical reading.
A. INTELLECTUAL SKILLS & MODES OF THINKING:  1. Students will develop the skills of inquiry, abstract logical thinking, critical analysis, synthesis, decision making, and other aspects of the critical process through the close analysis and evaluation of fundamental issues. Students confront such fundamental questions as "What is the relationship between language and the world?" "What is knowledge?" "What is philosophy?" "What is truth?" Conflicting answers to these questions are explored and evaluated. Students are then encouraged to formulate their own apswers and them will do no because them is a second to the critical reading.  2. Students will develon literacy through active critical reading.	A. INTELLECTUAL SKILLS & MODES OF THINKING:  1. Students will develop the skills of inquiry, abstract logical hinking, critical analysis, synthesis, decision making, and other aspects of he critical process through the close analysis and evaluation of fundamental such Students confront such fundamental questions as "What is the elationship between language and the world?" "What is knowledge?" "What is truth?" Conflicting answers to these questions are knowledge and evaluated. Students are then encouraged to formulate their own processes, and, there will do no hoosest them encouraged to formulate their own processes, and, there will develop literacy, through active critical reading.  2. Students will develop literacy, through active critical reading.
A. INTELLECTUAL SKILLS & MODES OF THINKING:  1. Students will develop the skills of inquiry, abstract logical thinking, critical analysis, synthesis, decision making, and other aspects of the critical process through the close analysis and evaluation of fundamental issues. Students confront such fundamental questions as "What is the relationship between language and the world?" "What is knowledge?" "What is philosophy?" "What is truth?" Conflicting answers to these questions are explored and evaluated. Students are then encouraged to formulate their own apswers and them will do no because them is a second to the critical reading.  2. Students will develon literacy through active critical reading.	A. INTELLECTUAL SKILLS & MODES OF THINKING:  1. Students will develop the skills of inquiry, abstract logical hinking, critical analysis, synthesis, decision making, and other aspects of he critical process through the close analysis and evaluation of fundamental such Students confront such fundamental questions as "What is the elationship between language and the world?" "What is knowledge?" "What is truth?" Conflicting answers to these questions are knowledge and evaluated. Students are then encouraged to formulate their own processes, and, there will do no hoosest them encouraged to formulate their own processes, and, there will develop literacy, through active critical reading.  2. Students will develop literacy, through active critical reading.
A. INTELLECTUAL SKILLS & MODES OF THINKING:  1. Students will develop the skills of inquiry, abstract logical thinking, critical analysis, synthesis, decision making, and other aspects of the critical process through the close analysis and evaluation of fundamental issues. Students confront such fundamental questions as "What is the relationship between language and the world?" "What is knowledge?" "What is philosophy?" "What is truth?" Conflicting answers to these questions are explored and evaluated. Students are then encouraged to formulate their own apswers and them will do no because them is a second to the critical reading.  2. Students will develon literacy through active critical reading.	A. INTELLECTUAL SKILLS & MODES OF THINKING:  1. Students will develop the skills of inquiry, abstract logical hinking, critical analysis, synthesis, decision making, and other aspects of he critical process through the close analysis and evaluation of fundamental such Students confront such fundamental questions as "What is the elationship between language and the world?" "What is knowledge?" "What is truth?" Conflicting answers to these questions are knowledge and evaluated. Students are then encouraged to formulate their own processes, and, there will do no hoosest them encouraged to formulate their own processes, and, there will develop literacy, through active critical reading.  2. Students will develop literacy, through active critical reading.	1
A. INTELLECTUAL SKILLS & MODES OF THINKING:  1. Students will develop the skills of inquiry, abstract logical thinking, critical analysis, synthesis, decision making, and other aspects of the critical process through the close analysis and evaluation of fundamental issues. Students confront such fundamental questions as "What is the relationship between language and the world?" "What is knowledge?" "What is philosophy?" "What is truth?" Conflicting answers to these questions are explored and evaluated. Students are then encouraged to formulate their own apswers and them will do no because them is a second to the critical reading.  2. Students will develon literacy through active critical reading.	A. INTELLECTUAL SKILLS & MODES OF THINKING:  1. Students will develop the skills of inquiry, abstract logical hinking, critical analysis, synthesis, decision making, and other aspects of he critical process through the close analysis and evaluation of fundamental such Students confront such fundamental questions as "What is the elationship between language and the world?" "What is knowledge?" "What is truth?" Conflicting answers to these questions are knowledge and evaluated. Students are then encouraged to formulate their own processes, and, there will do no hoosest them encouraged to formulate their own processes, and, there will develop literacy, through active critical reading.  2. Students will develop literacy, through active critical reading.	PHILOSOPHY 410 CONTER	PORARY PHILOSOPHY
1. Students will develop the skills of inquiry, abstract logical thinking, critical analysis, synthesis, decision making, and other aspects of the critical process through the close analysis and evaluation of fundamental issues. Students confront such fundamental questions as "What is the relationship between language and the world?" "What is knowledge?" "What is philosophy?" "What is truth?" Conflicting answers to these questions are explored and evaluated. Students are then encouraged to formulate their own answers, and, they will do no becomes these formulate their own answers, and, they will do no becomes these formulate their critical reading.  2. Students will develon literacy brough active critical reading.	A. INTELLECTUAL SKILLS & MODES OF THINKING:  1. Students will develop the skills of inquiry, abstract logical hinking, critical analysis, synthesis, decision making, and other aspects of the critical process through the close analysis and evaluation of fundamental ssues. Students confront such fundamental questions as "What is the elationship between language and the world?" "What is knowledge?" "What is inhilosophy?" "What is truth?" Conflicting answers to these questions are kplored and evaluated. Students are then encouraged to formulate their own pawers and, they will do so because these increase of the same and the s
1. Students will develop the skills of inquiry, abstract logical thinking, critical analysis, synthesis, decision making, and other aspects of the critical process through the close analysis and evaluation of fundamental issues. Students confront such fundamental questions as "What is the relationship between language and the world?" "What is knowledge?" "What is philosophy?" "What is truth?" Conflicting answers to these questions are explored and evaluated. Students are then encouraged to formulate their own answers, and, they will do no becomes these formulate their own answers, and, they will do no becomes these formulate their critical reading.  2. Students will develon literacy brough active critical reading.	A. INTELLECTUAL SKILLS & MODES OF THINKING:  1. Students will develop the skills of inquiry, abstract logical hinking, critical analysis, synthesis, decision making, and other aspects of the critical process through the close analysis and evaluation of fundamental ssues. Students confront such fundamental questions as "What is the elationship between language and the world?" "What is knowledge?" "What is inhilosophy?" "What is truth?" Conflicting answers to these questions are kplored and evaluated. Students are then encouraged to formulate their own pawers and, they will do so because these increase of the same and the s	II IIDEDAI GMUDITIG GALLG
1. Students will develop the skills of inquiry, abstract logical thinking, critical analysis, synthesis, decision making, and other aspects of the critical process through the close analysis and evaluation of fundamental issues. Students confront such fundamental questions as "What is the relationship between language and the world?" "What is knowledge?" "What is philosophy?" "What is truth?" Conflicting answers to these questions are explored and evaluated. Students are then encouraged to formulate their own areswers and, there will do no bosome these instances of the critical reading.  2. Students will develop literacy through active critical reading.	1. Students will develop the skills of inquiry, abstract logical hinking, critical analysis, synthesis, decision making, and other aspects of he critical process through the close analysis and evaluation of fundamental sues. Students confront such fundamental questions as "What is the elationship between language and the world?" "What is knowledge?" "What is hilosophy?" "What is truth?" Conflicting answers to these questions are explored and evaluated. Students are then encouraged to formulate their own revers and the world?" It has become these process of the process o	11. DIBERAL STUDIES GOALS
1. Students will develop the skills of inquiry, abstract logical thinking, critical analysis, synthesis, decision making, and other aspects of the critical process through the close analysis and evaluation of fundamental issues. Students confront such fundamental questions as "What is the relationship between language and the world?" "What is knowledge?" "What is philosophy?" "What is truth?" Conflicting answers to these questions are explored and evaluated. Students are then encouraged to formulate their own answers and, the will do no because these incompanies that their own answers and, the will develop literacy through active critical reading.  2. Students will develop literacy through active critical reading.	1. Students will develop the skills of inquiry, abstract logical hinking, critical analysis, synthesis, decision making, and other aspects of he critical process through the close analysis and evaluation of fundamental sues. Students confront such fundamental questions as "What is the elationship between language and the world?" "What is knowledge?" "What is hilosophy?" "What is truth?" Conflicting answers to these questions are knowledged and evaluated. Students are then encouraged to formulate their own savers and, they will do not become them.  PRIMARY  2. Students will develon literacy through active critical reading	A. INTELLECTUAL SKILLS & MODES OF TH	TNKING•
thinking, critical analysis, synthesis, decision making, and other aspects of the critical process through the close analysis and evaluation of fundamental issues. Students confront such fundamental questions as "What is the relationship between language and the world?" "What is knowledge?" "What is philosophy?" "What is truth?" Conflicting answers to these questions are explored and evaluated. Students are then encouraged to formulate their own answers and them will do no because these courses the conflictions are supplied by the confliction of the conflict	hinking, critical analysis, synthesis, decision making, and other aspects of he critical process through the close analysis and evaluation of fundamental ssues. Students confront such fundamental questions as "What is the elationship between language and the world?" "What is knowledge?" "What is inilosophy?" "What is truth?" Conflicting answers to these questions are explored and evaluated. Students are then encouraged to formulate their own newers and the world?" "And the will do no hosewers and these decisions are several and the world?"  2. Students will develon liferacy through active critical reading		incing.
thinking, critical analysis, synthesis, decision making, and other aspects of the critical process through the close analysis and evaluation of fundamental issues. Students confront such fundamental questions as "What is the relationship between language and the world?" "What is knowledge?" "What is philosophy?" "What is truth?" Conflicting answers to these questions are explored and evaluated. Students are then encouraged to formulate their own answers and them will do no because these courses the conflictions are supplied by the confliction of the conflict	hinking, critical analysis, synthesis, decision making, and other aspects of he critical process through the close analysis and evaluation of fundamental ssues. Students confront such fundamental questions as "What is the elationship between language and the world?" "What is knowledge?" "What is inilosophy?" "What is truth?" Conflicting answers to these questions are explored and evaluated. Students are then encouraged to formulate their own newers and the world?" "And the will do no hosewers and these decisions are several and the world?"  2. Students will develon liferacy through active critical reading	1. Students will develop the skil	ls of inquiry, abstract logical issues. Students confront such fundamental questions as "What is the relationship between language and the world?" "What is knowledge?" "What is philosophy?" "What is truth?" Conflicting answers to these questions are explored and evaluated. Students are then encouraged to formulate their own answers and, there will do so becomes these increases affect the encouraged to formulate their own asswers and, there will do so becomes these increases affect the encouraged to formulate their own asswers.  2. Students will develon literacy through active critical reading	ives.  PRIMARY  2. Students will develon literacy through active critical reading.	thinking, critical analysis, synthesis, dec	ision making, and other aspects of relationship between language and the world?" "What is knowledge?" "What is philosophy?" "What is truth?" Conflicting answers to these questions are explored and evaluated. Students are then encouraged to formulate their own enswers and, they will do no become the formulate their own the encouraged to formulate their own enswers and, they will do no become the formulate their own the encouraged to formulate their own enswers and, they will do no become the encouraged to formulate their own enswers and, they will develop the encouraged to formulate their own enswers and, they will develop the encouraged to formulate their own enswers and the encouraged to formulate their own encouraged	elationship between language and the world?" "What is knowledge?" "What is hilosophy?" "What is truth?" Conflicting answers to these questions are knowled and evaluated. Students are then encouraged to formulate their own nawers and them will do no because these increases of the confliction of the	the critical process through the close anal	vsis and evaluation of fundamental philosophy?" "What is truth?" Conflicting answers to these questions are explored and evaluated. Students are then encouraged to formulate their own apswers and, they will do no because these income officer their apswers.  PRIMARY  2. Students will days on literacy through active critical reading	ives.  PRIMARY  2. Students will develon literacy through active critical reading	relationship between language and the small	questions as "What is the
lives.  PRIMARY  2. Students will develon literacy through active critical reading	ives.  PRIMARY  2. Students will develop literacy through active critical reading	philosophy?" "What is truth?" Conflicting	"What is knowledge?" "What is
lives.  PRIMARY  2. Students will develon literacy through active critical reading	ives.  PRIMARY  2. Students will develon literacy through active critical reading	explored and evaluated. Students are then	encouraged to formulate their own
2. Students will develon literacy through active critical reading	2. Students will develon literacy through active critical reading	answers and, thewwill do so because these	incodinged to formulate their own
2. Students will develon literacy through active critical reading	2. Students will develon literacy through active critical reading	t ==
2. Students will develon literacy through active critical reading	2. Students will develon literacy through active critical reading
2. Students will develon literacy through active critical reading	2. Students will develon literacy through active critical reading
2. Students will develon literacy through active critical reading	2. Students will develon literacy through active critical reading
2. Students will develon literacy through active critical reading	2. Students will develon literacy through active critical reading
2. Students will develon literacy through active critical reading	2. Students will develon literacy through active critical reading
2. Students will develon literacy through active critical reading	2. Students will develon literacy through active critical reading
2. Students will develon literacy through active critical reading	2. Students will develon literacy through active critical reading	A
2. Students will develon literacy through active critical reading	2. Students will develon literacy through active critical reading	livas
		iives.	PRIMARY

		2. Students will develon literacy	through active critical reading
		2. Students will develon literacy	thro ugh active critical reading .
		2. Students will develon literacy	r_through active critical reading
		2. Students will develon literacy	r_through active critical reading
		2. Students will develon literacy	r thro nnh active cri tical read ing r_through active critical reading
			through active critical reading
			through active critical reading
			through active critical reading
			through active critical reading
			through active critical reading
			through active critical reading
			through active critical reading
			through active critical reading
			through active critical reading
			through active critical reading

一种

• :•

LIBERAL STUDIES? Please attach answers to these questions.  A. If this is a multiple-section, multiple-instructor course, there should be a basi equivalency (though not necessarily uniformity) among the sections in such things as objectives, content, assignments, and evaluation. Note: this should not be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments of teach the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses to allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching an capitalizes on the streamgths of individual faculty.  That are the strategies that your department will use to seeme the	A. If this is a multiple-section, multiple-instructor course, there should be a base equivalency (though not necessarily uniformity) among the sections in surthings as objectives, content, assignments, and evaluation. Note: this should not be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments teach the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching a capitalizes on the streamgths of individual faculty.
A. If this is a multiple-section, multiple-instructor course, there should be a basi equivalency (though not necessarily uniformity) among the sections in such things as objectives, content, assignments, and evaluation. Note: this should not be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments of teach the same way: departments are encouraged to develop their courses to allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching an capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.	A. If this is a multiple-section, multiple-instructor course, there should be a base equivalency (though not necessarily uniformity) among the sections in surthings as objectives, content, assignments, and evaluation. Note: this should not be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments teach the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching a capitalizes on the streamgths of individual faculty.
A. If this is a multiple-section, multiple-instructor course, there should be a basi equivalency (though not necessarily uniformity) among the sections in such things as objectives, content, assignments, and evaluation. Note: this should not be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments of teach the same way: departments are encouraged to develop their courses to allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching an capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.	A. If this is a multiple-section, multiple-instructor course, there should be a base equivalency (though not necessarily uniformity) among the sections in surthings as objectives, content, assignments, and evaluation. Note: this should not be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments teach the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching a capitalizes on the streamgths of individual faculty.	•
A. If this is a multiple-section, multiple-instructor course, there should be a basi equivalency (though not necessarily uniformity) among the sections in such things as objectives, content, assignments, and evaluation. Note: this should not be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments of teach the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses to allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching an capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.	A. If this is a multiple-section, multiple-instructor course, there should be a base equivalency (though not necessarily uniformity) among the sections in surthings as objectives, content, assignments, and evaluation. Note: this should not be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments teach the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching a capitalizes on the streamgths of individual faculty.
A. If this is a multiple-section, multiple-instructor course, there should be a basi equivalency (though not necessarily uniformity) among the sections in such things as objectives, content, assignments, and evaluation. Note: this should not be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments of teach the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses to allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching an capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.	A. If this is a multiple-section, multiple-instructor course, there should be a base equivalency (though not necessarily uniformity) among the sections in surthings as objectives, content, assignments, and evaluation. Note: this should not be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments teach the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching a capitalizes on the streamgths of individual faculty.
A. If this is a multiple-section, multiple-instructor course, there should be a basi equivalency (though not necessarily uniformity) among the sections in such things as objectives, content, assignments, and evaluation. Note: this should not be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments of teach the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses to allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching an capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.	A. If this is a multiple-section, multiple-instructor course, there should be a base equivalency (though not necessarily uniformity) among the sections in such things as objectives, content, assignments, and evaluation. Note: this should not be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments teach the same way: departments are encouraged to develop their courses allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching a capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.
A. If this is a multiple-section, multiple-instructor course, there should be a basi equivalency (though not necessarily uniformity) among the sections in such things as objectives, content, assignments, and evaluation. Note: this should not be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments of teach the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses to allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching an capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.	A. If this is a multiple-section, multiple-instructor course, there should be a base equivalency (though not necessarily uniformity) among the sections in such things as objectives, content assignments, and evaluation. Note: this should not be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments teach the same way: departments are encouraged to develop their courses allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching a capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.	 	,
A. If this is a multiple-section, multiple-instructor course, there should be a basi equivalency (though not necessarily uniformity) among the sections in such things as objectives, content, assignments, and evaluation. Note: this should not be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments of teach the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses to allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching an capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.	A. If this is a multiple-section, multiple-instructor course, there should be a base equivalency (though not necessarily uniformity) among the sections in surthings as objectives, content, assignments, and evaluation. Note: this should not be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments teach the same way: departments are encouraged to develop their courses allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching a capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.
A. If this is a multiple-section, multiple-instructor course, there should be a basi equivalency (though not necessarily uniformity) among the sections in such things as objectives, content, assignments, and evaluation. Note: this should not be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments of teach the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses to allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching an capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.	A. If this is a multiple-section, multiple-instructor course, there should be a base equivalency (though not necessarily uniformity) among the sections in surthings as objectives, content, assignments, and evaluation. Note: this should not be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments teach the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching a capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.
A. If this is a multiple-section, multiple-instructor course, there should be a basi equivalency (though not necessarily uniformity) among the sections in such things as objectives, content, assignments, and evaluation. Note: this should not be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments of teach the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses to allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching an capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.	A. If this is a multiple-section, multiple-instructor course, there should be a base equivalency (though not necessarily uniformity) among the sections in surthings as objectives, content, assignments, and evaluation. Note: this should not be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments teach the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching a capitalizes on the streamgths of individual faculty.
A. If this is a multiple-section, multiple-instructor course, there should be a basi equivalency (though not necessarily uniformity) among the sections in such things as objectives, content, assignments, and evaluation. Note: this should not be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments of teach the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses to allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching an capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.	A. If this is a multiple-section, multiple-instructor course, there should be a base equivalency (though not necessarily uniformity) among the sections in surthings as objectives, content, assignments, and evaluation. Note: this should not be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments teach the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching a capitalizes on the streamgths of individual faculty.
A. If this is a multiple-section, multiple-instructor course, there should be a basi equivalency (though not necessarily uniformity) among the sections in sucthings as objectives, content, assignments, and evaluation. Note: this should not be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments of teach the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses to allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching an capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.	A. If this is a multiple-section, multiple-instructor course, there should be a base equivalency (though not necessarily uniformity) among the sections in surthings as objectives, content, assignments, and evaluation. Note: this should not be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments teach the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching a capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.
A. If this is a multiple-section, multiple-instructor course, there should be a basi equivalency (though not necessarily uniformity) among the sections in sucthings as objectives, content, assignments, and evaluation. Note: this should not be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments of teach the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses to allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching an capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.	A. If this is a multiple-section, multiple-instructor course, there should be a base equivalency (though not necessarily uniformity) among the sections in surthings as objectives, content, assignments, and evaluation. Note: this should not be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments teach the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching a capitalizes on the streamgths of individual faculty.
A. If this is a multiple-section, multiple-instructor course, there should be a basi equivalency (though not necessarily uniformity) among the sections in such things as objectives, content, assignments, and evaluation. Note: this should not be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments of teach the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses to allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching an capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.	A. If this is a multiple-section, multiple-instructor course, there should be a base equivalency (though not necessarily uniformity) among the sections in surthings as objectives, content, assignments, and evaluation. Note: this should not be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments teach the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching a capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.
A. If this is a multiple-section, multiple-instructor course, there should be a basi equivalency (though not necessarily uniformity) among the sections in such things as objectives, content, assignments, and evaluation. Note: this should not be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments of teach the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses to allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching an capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.	A. If this is a multiple-section, multiple-instructor course, there should be a base equivalency (though not necessarily uniformity) among the sections in surthings as objectives, content, assignments, and evaluation. Note: this should not be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments teach the same way: departments are encouraged to develop their courses allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching a capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.
A. If this is a multiple-section, multiple-instructor course, there should be a basi equivalency (though not necessarily uniformity) among the sections in such things as objectives, content, assignments, and evaluation. Note: this should not be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments of teach the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses to allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching an capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.	A. If this is a multiple-section, multiple-instructor course, there should be a base equivalency (though not necessarily uniformity) among the sections in surthings as objectives, content, assignments, and evaluation. Note: this should not be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments teach the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching a capitalizes on the streamgths of individual faculty.
A. If this is a multiple-section, multiple-instructor course, there should be a basi equivalency (though not necessarily uniformity) among the sections in such things as objectives, content, assignments, and evaluation. Note: this should not be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments of teach the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses to allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching an capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.	A. If this is a multiple-section, multiple-instructor course, there should be a base equivalency (though not necessarily uniformity) among the sections in surthings as objectives, content, assignments, and evaluation. Note: this should not be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments teach the same way: departments are encouraged to develop their courses allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching a capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.	7-
A. If this is a multiple-section, multiple-instructor course, there should be a basi equivalency (though not necessarily uniformity) among the sections in sucthings as objectives, content, assignments, and evaluation. Note: this should not be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments of teach the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses to allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching an capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.	A. If this is a multiple-section, multiple-instructor course, there should be a base equivalency (though not necessarily uniformity) among the sections in surthings as objectives, content, assignments, and evaluation. Note: this should not be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments teach the same way: departments are encouraged to develop their courses allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching a capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.
A. If this is a multiple-section, multiple-instructor course, there should be a basi equivalency (though not necessarily uniformity) among the sections in sucthings as objectives, content, assignments, and evaluation. Note: this should not be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments of teach the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses to allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching an capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.	A. If this is a multiple-section, multiple-instructor course, there should be a base equivalency (though not necessarily uniformity) among the sections in surthings as objectives, content, assignments, and evaluation. Note: this should not be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments teach the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching a capitalizes on the streamgths of individual faculty.
A. If this is a multiple-section, multiple-instructor course, there should be a basi equivalency (though not necessarily uniformity) among the sections in sucthings as objectives, content, assignments, and evaluation. Note: this should not be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments of teach the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses to allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching an capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.	A. If this is a multiple-section, multiple-instructor course, there should be a base equivalency (though not necessarily uniformity) among the sections in surthings as objectives, content, assignments, and evaluation. Note: this should not be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments teach the same way: departments are encouraged to develop their courses allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching a capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.
A. If this is a multiple-section, multiple-instructor course, there should be a basi equivalency (though not necessarily uniformity) among the sections in such things as objectives, content, assignments, and evaluation. Note: this should not be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments of teach the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses to allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching an capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.	A. If this is a multiple-section, multiple-instructor course, there should be a base equivalency (though not necessarily uniformity) among the sections in such things as objectives, content assignments, and evaluation. Note: this should not be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments teach the same way: departments are encouraged to develop their courses allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching a capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.
A. If this is a multiple-section, multiple-instructor course, there should be a basi equivalency (though not necessarily uniformity) among the sections in sucthings as objectives, content, assignments, and evaluation. Note: this should not be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments teach the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching an capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.	A. If this is a multiple-section, multiple-instructor course, there should be a base equivalency (though not necessarily uniformity) among the sections in surthings as objectives, content, assignments, and evaluation. Note: this should not be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments teach the same way: departments are encouraged to develop their courses allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching a capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.
A. If this is a multiple-section, multiple-instructor course, there should be a basi equivalency (though not necessarily uniformity) among the sections in sucthings as objectives, content, assignments, and evaluation. Note: this should not be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments of teach the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching an capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.	A. If this is a multiple-section, multiple-instructor course, there should be a base equivalency (though not necessarily uniformity) among the sections in surthings as objectives, content, assignments, and evaluation. Note: this should not be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments teach the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching a capitalizes on the streamgths of individual faculty.
A. If this is a multiple-section, multiple-instructor course, there should be a basi equivalency (though not necessarily uniformity) among the sections in sucthings as objectives, content, assignments, and evaluation. Note: this should not be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments of teach the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses to allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching an capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.	A. If this is a multiple-section, multiple-instructor course, there should be a base equivalency (though not necessarily uniformity) among the sections in surthings as objectives, content, assignments, and evaluation. Note: this should not be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments teach the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching a capitalizes on the streamgths of individual faculty.
A. If this is a multiple-section, multiple-instructor course, there should be a basi equivalency (though not necessarily uniformity) among the sections in sucthings as objectives, content, assignments, and evaluation. Note: this should not be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments of teach the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses to allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching an capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.	A. If this is a multiple-section, multiple-instructor course, there should be a base equivalency (though not necessarily uniformity) among the sections in surthings as objectives, content, assignments, and evaluation. Note: this should not be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments teach the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching a capitalizes on the streamgths of individual faculty.	T	IREPAL STUDIES? Diagra stitch showers to these questions
be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments of teach the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses to allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching an capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.	be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments teach the same way: departments are encouraged to develop their courses allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching a capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.	-	White Arabita: Lieuse attach answers to mese diestions.
be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments of the the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses to allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching an capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.	be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments teach the same way: departments are encouraged to develop their courses allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching a capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.		•
equivalency (though not necessarily uniformity) among the sections in such things as objectives, content, assignments, and evaluation. Note: this should not be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments of teach the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses to allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching an capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.	be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments teach the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching a capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.		To this is a multiple against multiple to construct the state of the s
be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments of teach the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses to allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching an capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.	be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments teach the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching a capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.		It this is a multiple-section, multiple-instructor course, there should be a basi
be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments of teach the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses to allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching an capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.	be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments teach the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching a capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.		equivalency (though not necessarily uniformity) among the sections in suc
be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments of teach the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses to allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching and capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.	be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments teach the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching a capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.		things as thierrives content assignments and application. Notes this should a
teach the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses to allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching an capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.	teach the same way: departments are encouraged to develop their courses allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching a capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.		atmit a object of contest which the contest will explain the contest of the conte
teach the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses to allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching an capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.	teach the same way: departments are encouraged to develop their courses allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching a capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.
teach the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses to allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching an capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.	teach the same way: departments are encouraged to develop their courses allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching a capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.
teach the same way; departments are encouraged to develop their courses to allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching an capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.	teach the same way: departments are encouraged to develop their courses allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching a capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.		be interpreted to mean that all professors must make the same assignments of
allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching an capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.	allow the flexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching a capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.		thank the same warring and an analysis and a same and a land a thing in the same warring of the same warri capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.	capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.		ment the same way, departments are encouraged to develop their courses (
capitalizes on the streamgths of individual faculty.	capitalizes on the streangths of individual faculty.		allow the Hexibility which contributes to imaginative, committed teaching an canitalizes on the stream oths of individual family
That are the strategies that your descripest will nee to seemen the	That are the strategies that your densement will use to some the		the state of the s
That are the strategies that your densetment will nee to seemee the	That are the strategies that your densetment will nee to seemen the	•
			That are the strategies that your descriment will see to see the Ą
		7
		* . * = * .

III. GENERAL CRITERIA

	A. All instructors who have taught this course during the previous academic year and summer and all who intend to teach it the following academic year will meet at the conclusion of the spring semester. They will review this
	The state of the spring bomester. The will review this
M No.
4);
	· ·
k —
, '
At-
-
', -
P. J —

-
*
A <sub>1-</sub>
` .	F1. 1
1
1
 راي
\d
T
-

_
Ĺ
n

CHECK LIST -- LIBERAL STUDIES ELECTIVES

	Knowledge Area Criteria which the course must meet:
	Treat concepts, themes, and events in sufficient depth to enable students to _	enable dudente in ì —
.
-
	h.
	1-
	•
	X Suggest the major intellectual questions/amblems which in £	Suggest the major intellectual questions/problems which interest practitioners of a discipline and explore critically the interest practi-

IV. KNOWLEDGE	AREA	CRITERIA:
---------------	------	-----------

- 1, 2 & 3. The first three are obviously met. SEE SYLLABUS.

V. LIBERAL STUDIES ELECTIVE CRITERIA:

- The course meets the general criteria for all liberal studies courses. The course is not a technical, professional or pre-professional course.